Trio indicted for alleged Everett casino land swindle

Boston. Authorities say one of the suspects is a known associate of the La Cosa Nostra mob family.

A trio of area men have been indicted on state and federal charges in connection with an attempt to swindle a casino land deal in Everett.

Authorities say the three men tried to hide the interest of a convicted felon in a parcel of Everett land from Wynn Resorts, which last month won a Boston area casino license from state gaming regulators.

The three men — Charles Lightbody, 54, of Revere, Dustin DeNunzio, 37, of Cambridge and Anthony Gattineri, a 56-year-old Winchester resident, all held a financial interest in FBT Everett Realty LLC, which held the title to a parcel of land where Wynn Resorts wants to build a casino, according to U.S. Attorney Carmen Ortiz and Massachusetts Attorney General Martha Coakley.

The three have been indicted by a grand jury for concealing Lightbody's interest in the land. Authorities describe Lightbody as a convicted felon and a known associate of the New England Family of La Cosa Nostra. Lightbody wanted to receive money from Wynn in exchange for the land, according to authorities.

All three are facing charges of conspiracy to commit wire fraud, wire fraud, and aiding and abetting.

Authorities say the trio made it seem as if Lightbody's interest in FBT had been transferred to Gattineri in exchange for a $1.7 million promissory note.

Furthermore, the three created fake documents that reflected the supposed transaction, lied in an email to Wynn that Lightbody no longer had any interest in the land and misled the gaming commission's investigators about his role.

The three allegedly hid his role in FBT because he had a criminal record, according to state authorities. It is illegal in the state for felons to have a stake — even an indirect one — in a casino.

Not Lightbody's first rodeo

This week's indictment is not Charles Lightbody's first run-in with the law.

- Last fall, Lightbody, who has an extensive criminal record, allegedly assaulted a man at a casino rally in Revere, according to police. Police say the victim was in favor of bringing a casino to Suffolk Downs, an historic horse track which straddles the East Boston-Revere border. Lightbody, meanwhile, was opposing the Suffolk Downs proposal.
- Last month, the state's gaming commission chose Wynn's Everett proposal over Mohegan Sun's plans to bring a casino to Suffolk Downs.

Patrick, Walsh to discuss 2024 Boston Olympic bid

Boston Mayor Marty Walsh and Gov. Deval Patrick are expected to meet on Monday with a group of athletes and advocates pushing for the 2024 Summer Olympics to be held in the Hub.

Thirty Olympic athletes from Massachusetts, including figure skater Nancy Kerrigan, will join the pair at pingpong hot spot Blazing Paddles on Lansdowne Street to garner support for the Boston Olympic bid.

In June, Boston was selected by the United States Olympic Committee as one of four candidate cities for a potential bid to host the 2024 Games.

Walsh and Patrick have both previously voiced support of the idea.

"Boston is known across the world for its sports prowess and this impressive group of Massachusetts-bred Olympians is a testament to our sporting spirit," Walsh said in an emailed statement Thursday.

"I look forward to joining Gov. Patrick to meet these incredibly accomplished and inspiring athletes and hear their thoughts on Boston's bid to host the 2024 Summer Games. My hope is that regardless of the outcome, the Boston 2024 effort will promote a better long-term relationship with our local Olympic heroes," Walsh said.

Supporters have argued that holding the Games in Boston would act as a catalyst for infrastructure growth in the region. Last week, a group called No Boston Olympics released a report that claimed hosting the massive event could cost between $10 billion and $20 billion.

The United States Olympic Committee's will choose whether to pursue a Boston bid next year. The 2024 Summer Olympics host will be chosen in 2017. MORGAN ROUSSEAU

Graffiti

Serial vandal convicted

A Chicago man has been sentenced to a year behind bars after being convicted of more than a dozen counts of vandalism that targeted various MBTA properties.

A jury in Brighton convicted John Biesiot, 36, on 15 counts of vandalism in three tagging incidents, which occurred in Brighton, Dorchester and Cambridge.

Authorities say Biesiot was identified as having the graffiti tag name "WYSE" and as being part of the "Dirty Thirty" graffiti crew. METRO

Jury seated for Phillipos trial

A jury was seated Thursday in the federal trial of Robel Phillipos, a Cambridge resident and high school friend of accused Boston bomber Dzhokhar Tsarnaev.

Phillipos, 21, is charged with lying to detectives three days after the deadly attack. Prosecutors claim he denied being present while two other men removed evidence from Tsarnaev's UMass-Dartmouth dormitory.

Opening statements are scheduled for Monday at federal court in Boston. METRO

Bridgewater. Students angry over lack of information about rapes

Bridgewater State University students have launched an online petition protesting the college's decision not to alert them about two rapes that occurred there in September.

University officials said they did not release the information because the suspects in the assaults, which occurred on Sept. 3 and Sept. 20, were immediately identified and apprehended.

The school did, however, notify students of a Sept. 18 rape on campus because the suspect in that assault had not been arrested, and therefore still posed a risk to the community.

According to BSU student newspaper The Comment, the Change.org petition urges school officials to reconsider their decision not to notify students of certain sexual assaults on campus.

Bridgewater's president, Dana Mohler-Faria, released a statement that the university does not tolerate misconduct, violence or abuse.

"In the future, we will look to go beyond what is legally required if we determine it is in the best interest of our community. Additional changes, procedures and practices need to be considered and will involve active dialogue with the campus community," Mohler-Faria said. MORGAN ROUSSEAU

Startling trend

Two sexual assaults were reported last month at Massasoit Community College in Brockton. Another was reported at Stonehill College on Sept. 28. There were also reports of sexual assaults at Worcester State University and Curry College.

- The federal Clery Act requires colleges to issue immediate warnings of violent crimes that pose a threat to students.

Spooked

Cops: Dog may have scared away sex assailant

Police say a barking dog may have scared away an assailant who sexually assaulted a woman in Saugus on Tuesday evening.

Saugus police say the suspect attacked a woman who was running with her dog on Nason Road. The man, according to police, grabbed the woman by the hair, pushed her into a tree, told her he was armed with a knife and instructed her not to scream.

The assailant then grabbed her chest and genitals and struck her in the face, according to police. The victim's dog then began to bark, which caused other neighborhood dogs to bark. This, according to a statement from Saugus Police, "may have spooked the suspect, because he ran away."

An investigation is ongoing. METRO

Up to 100 possibly exposed to US Ebola patient; four isolated

Symptoms. Ebola can cause fever, bleeding, vomiting, diarrhea and spreads through contact with bodily fluids.

Up to 100 people may have had contact with the first person diagnosed with Ebola in the United States, and four people were quarantined in a Dallas apartment where sheets and other items used by the man were put in sealed plastic bags to prevent infection.

Health officials said on Thursday that 12 to 18 people had direct contact with the patient, who flew to Texas from Liberia via Brussels and Washington two weeks ago, and they in turn had contact with scores of others.

None of those thought to have had contact with the patient, Thomas Eric Duncan, were showing symptoms of Ebola, Dallas County officials said at a news conference.

In Liberia, the head of the country's airport authority, Binyah Kesselly, said the government could prosecute Duncan for denying he had contact with someone who was eventually diagnosed with Ebola.

The government said Duncan failed to declare that he helped neighbor Marthalene Williams after she fell critically ill on Sept. 15. Williams died.

Kesselly said Duncan was asked in a questionnaire whether he had come in contact with any Ebola victim or was showing any symptoms. "To all of these questions, Mr. Duncan answered 'no,'" Kesselly said.

Dallas County officials said the problem was very localized. "When I say local, I don't mean Dallas. I mean a very specific neighborhood in the northeast part of Dallas," Mayor Mike Rawlings told reporters. REUTERS

Air industry battles Ebola

Airlines and airports handling travel to countries worst hit by the Ebola epidemic are trying to prove that flying to West Africa is safe.

Some airlines have already suspended or cut back flights since the summer, and only one European carrier now offers direct services to Guinea, Sierra Leone and Liberia. However, those still operating have taken measures to protect passengers and crew, along with airports in the region and beyond. REUTERS

By the book

It would be cruel to spoil the twist that pops up halfway through "Gone Girl," but fortunately, many of the changes are in the first half. Most of Amy's diary entries and her early life with Nick have been condensed, as have some of Nick's more subtle psychological mistreatments of her as pressures mount.

Nick's narration is gone too, meaning we get less of an idea of his temper and his mild but noticeable misogyny — issues inherited from his now senile father, a sexist who likes to shout the B-word. In the film, his dad gets only one scene then disappears, and while he was never a prominent character, he still lends some darker insights into Nick's personality. That said, this is a largely faithful adaptation, and the second half of the film is appropriately totally nuts.

The 'Girl' you want

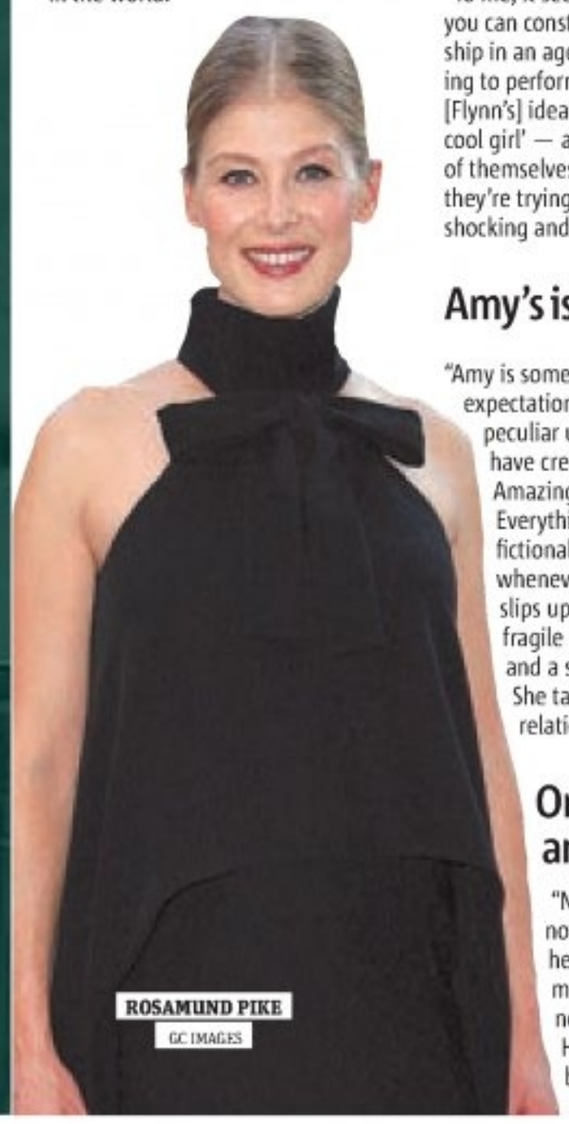
Interview. Rosamund Pike says "Gone Girl" speaks to an age when we can be whoever we want.

Ben Affleck and Rosamund Pike are seen in happier times early in the film version of "Gone Girl." / MERRICK MORTON

When Gillian Flynn's best-seller "Gone Girl" was to be made into a movie, casting its male lead — Nick Dunne, a man alternately hated and loved — was a no-brainer: Ben Affleck. Amy — Nick's missing, mysterious wife — was a little trickier. They wisely went with English actress Rosamund Pike, who skillfully delivers a diverse performance — much of which we can't talk about, for fear of spoilers. Luckily, there's still a lot that Pike can tell us about "Gone Girl."

Her experience with the novel

"I hadn't read it. I had my son just before it came out, so that gives you about six months underground without exposure to what's going on in the world."



ROSAMUND PIKE
GC IMAGES

Flynn's portrayal of courtship

"To me, it seems to be about how you can construct an honest relationship in an age where everyone's trying to perform to get a mate. There's [Flynn's] idea of women playing 'the cool girl' — a slightly altered version of themselves that suits the people they're trying to attract. That was shocking and new."

Amy's issues

"Amy is someone who has very high expectations ... engendered by her peculiar upbringing. Her parents have created this character, Amazing Amy, based on her. Everything falls in her lap, this fictional twin who succeeds whenever [real-world Amy] slips up. It's given Amy a very fragile sense of who she is and a sense of entitlement. She takes that with her into a relationship."

On Amy and Nick

"Nick Dunne is probably not the perfect match for her. He can be the perfect match. He is equally nonspecific, in a way. He's able to perform and be amazingly charming and compelling, but is equally a shlub who doesn't take his boxers off all day and plays video games. And that is not the guy Amy wants to be married to."

What it says about marriage

"There's a point in marriage where you can decide not to accept all parts of yourself, to only express some of yourself. Amy subscribes to that. You bury the parts of you that are lacking and you decide you should always be a high-wattage, dashing version of yourself — which is of course an unsustainable ideal."

What "Gone Girl" says about today

"[We're] in a climate where everyone is so aware of how they come across. People speak to each other on Skype — so they're not only having a telephone conversation, they're suddenly maybe not picking their teeth because someone can see them. Everyone is so much more self-aware than they were 50 years ago. You're always having to be aware of yourself from the outside, which is a recipe for narcissism. Even if you're not actually lying, even if there are photos of you, they're edited versions. You're choosing the best images, the best angles."

Author, author!

Gillian Flynn on adapting her book into a screenplay

When writer Gillian Flynn sold the film rights of "Gone Girl," part of the deal was she would get first crack at the screenplay. As it happened, she wrote every draft, with some help from her director, David Fincher, who she knew would be able to handle the film's multiple tones.

Were there things you were sad to lose?
There were certain characters I lost along the way who I knew we just didn't have time for. [Amy's ex-boyfriend's] mom was a character I always liked. She's only in a few pages. She had to go. There were little cul-de-sacs of the book I knew weren't going to be able to make it. Having been a journalist for so many years taught me not to be overly attached to certain things. You have to learn how to hit the delete button.

How did your husband react to the book?
He definitely had a big gulp moment. He was like, "What do we need to talk about?" But he's known me for a long time. He's seen me write all kinds of other dark, creepy stuff. He said, "Write it, we'll sort the rest out later." I call him the muse of the book about toxic marriage.

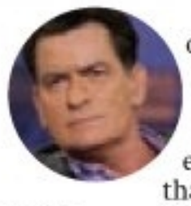
Theron at the gym: Steer clear

Oh my, Charlize Theron should just stick to using a personal trainer. After making headlines this summer for diva behavior at a SoulCycle spin class, including being rude to Tia Mowry, the Oscar-winner has reportedly moved to a new workout location — but her attitude hasn't changed. "She always arrives late to class with a scowl on her face and has the nerve to ask people who are already settled on their bikes to switch," a spin classmate at West Hollywood's Crunch gym tells In Touch of Theron. "She always causes a scene. People know to steer clear of her." Again, why is someone of Theron's stature and fame even taking classes like this if they cause her such clear displeasure? Isn't the whole point of being rich and famous that you don't have to mix with the normals? But, in Ms. Theron's defense, I'd challenge this anonymous source on the scowling. Of course she's scowling. It's a spin class. You're telling me you're excited to be there?

Amanda Bynes makes it hard not to write about her

New details are emerging about the ignoble end of Amanda Bynes' tenure at L.A.'s Fashion Institute of Design and Marketing. A fellow student tells TMZ that Bynes showed signs of trouble for a while, including ditching classes, being clearly high when she did bother to show up and paying other students to do her homework. The website now reports that Bynes not so much flunked out of the school as was kicked out after a recent incident where she was caught cheating on a test. It was the last straw.

Speaking of erratic behavior, Sheen goes 'tiger blood' on dentist



Charlie Sheen is reportedly being investigated for claims of assault with a deadly weapon after a dental appointment went awry, according to Radar Online. Sheen brought his own dentist with him for a procedure and supposedly pulled a knife on him. Sheen's bodyguard reportedly informed the dentist that the actor had been under the influence of cocaine at the time of the incident. You know, the usual.

Kutcher and Kunis welcome a baby girl, finally!

After what felt like a 20-month pregnancy, Mila Kunis and fiance Ashton Kutcher welcomed their first child, a girl, earlier this week, according to People magazine. "She's here and healthy," a source says.

'Angry Birds,' the movie? Really?

Is "Angry Birds" still a thing? Hollywood hopes so, as the film version of the mobile game is rolling forward. Jason Sudeikis, Bill Hader, Maya Rudolph (all pictured above from an "SNL" sketch) and Peter Dinklage have signed on to voice characters, according to the Hollywood Reporter. At least it's more timely than a Tetris movie, which was just announced.

Real-world love advice

www.theproblemismen.com

Charles J. Orlando is a relationship expert and author of the best-selling book series "The Problem with Women ... is Men." Find out more about him on his website, or visit him on Facebook for real-world love advice.

Getting back together: Yes, it can work

Relationships are always easy — in the beginning. Both people are on their best behavior. But sometimes, despite the initial euphoria and all those promises made, things don't go the way they were planned. And then it's over as quickly as it started. But the feelings that were shared don't dissipate at the same speed. Eventually you may ask yourself: "Do I get back together with my ex?" Once you're at that point, the process begins.

Stage 1: You question if it's worth trying again

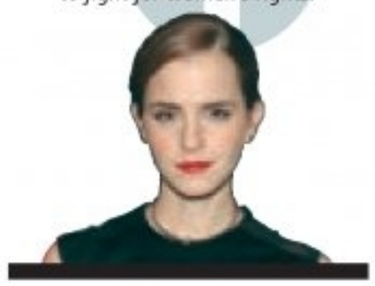
When it comes to past relationships, you can't go back. Going back means only one thing: repeating past situations and mistakes.

When you revisit an old flame, it still has to be new. Otherwise, you risk repeating behaviors and actions that broke you up in the first place.

Stage 2: You worry it might end all over again

How do you know if it will work this time? You don't. Like any relationship, it has its own chance for success or failure. However, you already have the knowledge of what doesn't work with him, so you're ahead of the game.

Emma Watson gave a powerful speech on gender equality at the U.N., championing HeFor-She, a campaign to enlist men to fight for women's rights.



But true to form, naysayers on both sides of the gender divide were fast to nitpick her words — including the New York Post. Some reporters used her words to take a contrarian view to get hits.

Stage 3: You wonder if you really belong together

There are no guarantees in life and love, but unless you are getting back together for love and companionship, you are doing it for the wrong reasons. There are some tell-tale signs that things may not work this time around, including a fear of failure and signs of repeating past behavior — from either party.

For exclusive commentary, visit Metro.us/blogs.

Stage 4: You work hard to fix what broke

For any relationship to be great, you need a combination of things: honesty, empathy, compassion, loyalty and more.

But if you are starting over with a past love, you'll need all that plus open, honest communication, a willingness to be wrong and the freedom to surrender control.

More pieces of advice

Reality check: If they are really into you, they will find a way. If they are just playing with your heart, they will find an excuse to ditch you.

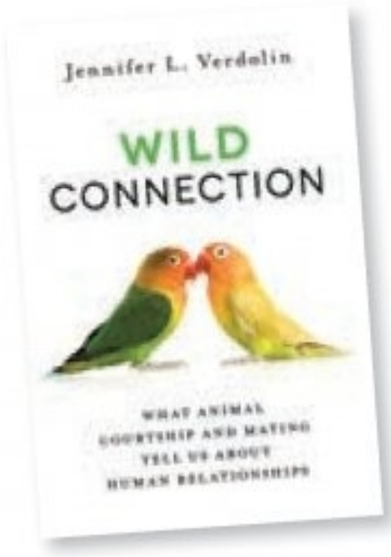
Dating. We can learn a lot about commitment from our fellow creatures

There's a lot we can learn about love from the birds and the bees — and the chickens, monkeys and squirrels. At least, that's true according to Jennifer Verdolin, an animal behavior expert and the author of the new book "Wild Connection: What Animal Courtship and Mating Tell Us About Human Relationships."

"We have this cultural idea of what dating and romance is, but if we just had a little awareness, we could make choices that are healthy," she says

Verdolin shares some of the most important things she learned about relationships through her work.



Rejection isn't personal: It's a myth that all creatures in the animal kingdom find partners easily. "I didn't take rejection well," says Verdolin. "But it really wasn't personal, this was just not the right person for me. Looking at animals and how easily they were rejected, I started to become really focused." She began asking, "Is this a good match for me?"

Monogamy isn't necessarily natural: Not every animal mates for life. Squirrels, for example, have several short-term partners over the course of their lifetimes. The nature of their courtship process, says Verdolin, reflects this. "The choices are often made based on physical appearance," she notes.

www.bmop.org
Opening BMOP's 19th season, Ronald Bruce Smith ("Constellation"), Anthony Paul De Ritis ("Riflessioni"), and David Felder ("Les Quatre Temps Cardinaux") envision new limits to what an orchestra can sound like. Gil Rose conducts the Boston Modern Orchestra Project and guest artists Patrick De Ritis, bassoon; Laura Aikin, soprano, and Ethan Herschenfeld, bass, in a celebration of the edge of the technology — the music frontier.

Keep it local. How do the acts playing The Sound of Our Town define that sound?

Visit Metro.us to see which local act has the outfits that Sadie Dupuis, of Speedy Ortiz (pictured), just can't miss. / DANIEL TOPETE

How do you define the sound of our town?
Sadie Dupuis, Speedy Ortiz: Because it's an academic city, Boston has a wealth of highly trained conservatory musicians, but for me the best music of Boston comes from its no-frills songwriters who write in a way that transcends genre. ... It's not a city people move to to get noticed or to get hype, so I think the artistic output is a lot more pure, honest and interesting than a larger or hipper city.
Anna Fox Rochinski, Quilt: A big part of the reason I appreciate the Boston scene is because there are so many genres that crisscross here. I think the sound of Boston is authentic. There isn't one reigning type of sound.
Adam Sankowski, The Grownup Noise: I would say that this show represents the "sound of our town" pretty well. It's an eclectic lineup, some indie, some soul, some hip-hop, some folk-ish stuff. Quality song-focused stuff all around. That's Boston at its best for me.

What's your fave local song?
Noel Heroux, Hooray for Earth: My fave local Boston song is "Hey Brian" by Porsches on the Autobahn.
Dutch ReBelle: Slaine's "99 bottles." Being from Milton but growing up around some of the rougher neighborhoods, I thought, "This is the soundtrack of my high school!!"
Brian King, Parks: Bleu's "Feet Don't Fail." Extremely catchy and sounded like nothing else on the radio among the Kid Rocks and Korns of 2000. METRO

Horoscope

♎ Libra | Sept. 23-Oct. 22. Don't let anyone put you down. Deal with a hurtful comment if it is causing you anguish. Make it clear that you don't appreciate being treated poorly.

♏ Scorpio | Oct. 23-Nov. 21. Hesitation and self-doubt will deter you from making the gains that will help you feel good about who you are and what you do.

♐ Sagittarius | Nov. 22-Dec. 21. Show more determination; you have the strength to go the distance, so hit the ground running. Close a deal or finish a project that you've left lingering. Don't fold under pressure.

♑ Capricorn | Dec. 22-Jan. 20. You will be able to coax others into joining your cause. If you are vigilant, you will be able to take advantage of a chance. Keep your emotions in check.

♒ Aquarius | Jan. 21-Feb. 18. Strive to be the best you can be. Keep your options open in order to take advantage of promising choices that will allow you to use your skills diversely. Master something.

♓ Pisces | Feb. 19-March 20. Read between the lines. False or conflicting information is apparent. Ask questions to satisfy your curiosity and avoid ending up in a compromising or awkward position.

♈ Aries | March 21-April 20. Reach outside the family circle if you need help. Emotions are bound to get in the way if relatives try to give you advice. Look for an unbiased counselor.

♉ Taurus | April 21-May 21. Difficulties may arise at work if you are drawn into a battle of wills with a colleague. Take the high road and stick to the facts. An emotional reaction will leave a bad impression.

♊ Gemini | May 22-June 20. It would be a good idea to revisit places that have special meaning for you. Conjure up pleasant memories in order to gain some thought-provoking insight into where you are.

♋ Cancer | June 21-July 22. Trade shows or conventions will offer valuable information about starting your own business. Put yourself in the loop so that you can keep abreast of opportunities to highlight your skills.

♌ Leo | July 23-Aug. 22. Make the most of what you have. Whiling away the time hoping Lady Luck will fall in your lap is not the answer. Hard work is required to advance.

♍ Virgo | Aug. 23-Sept. 22. Be tolerant of other people's opinions. There is no need to get upset if things aren't done your way. Trying to control everything will work against you. EUGENIA LAST

Letters

See something? Do something!

Re: 'Publishing letters denying climate change irresponsible' (Metro, Oct. 1) I think very much that Metro would print letters about the world being flat! If we have any of those rolling into Metro's inbox, I would love to see them. I'm sure they'd be just as hilarious as the ones about ice ages being natural. It is worth mentioning that global heating and cooling is natural in the way that a snake biting a human is natural; if you see it coming, you should probably do something to stop it.
ANTHONY P. FARRELL, VIA EMAIL

Climate predictions will be wrong

Re: 'Publishing letters denying climate change irresponsible' (Metro, Oct. 1) Letter writer Craig S. Altemose is an excellent example of the anti-science reasoning of the climate change Gaia cult. Open debate will strengthen a valid scientific theory, like evolution, and kill an invalid one, like global warming. We know the Earth is round and the Holocaust happened through irrefutable physical evidence from the past. We know that catastrophic man-made climate change is happening by computer models that try to predict the future of Earth's climate system — the same models that failed to predict the "pause" in global warming.
J.D. TORDOFF, VIA EMAIL

I think letter writer Craig Altemose has demonstrated why he believes there is unanimous agreement on climate change; it's because they silence any opposition or evidence which may contradict them. Even their own markers contradict themselves, which is why they constantly "evolve" on this "settled science" as to what constitutes climate change: "OMG, it's hot in summer!" "OMG it's cold in winter!" "Seas will boil!" "Low income and Ebola are signs of climate change!"

Match game

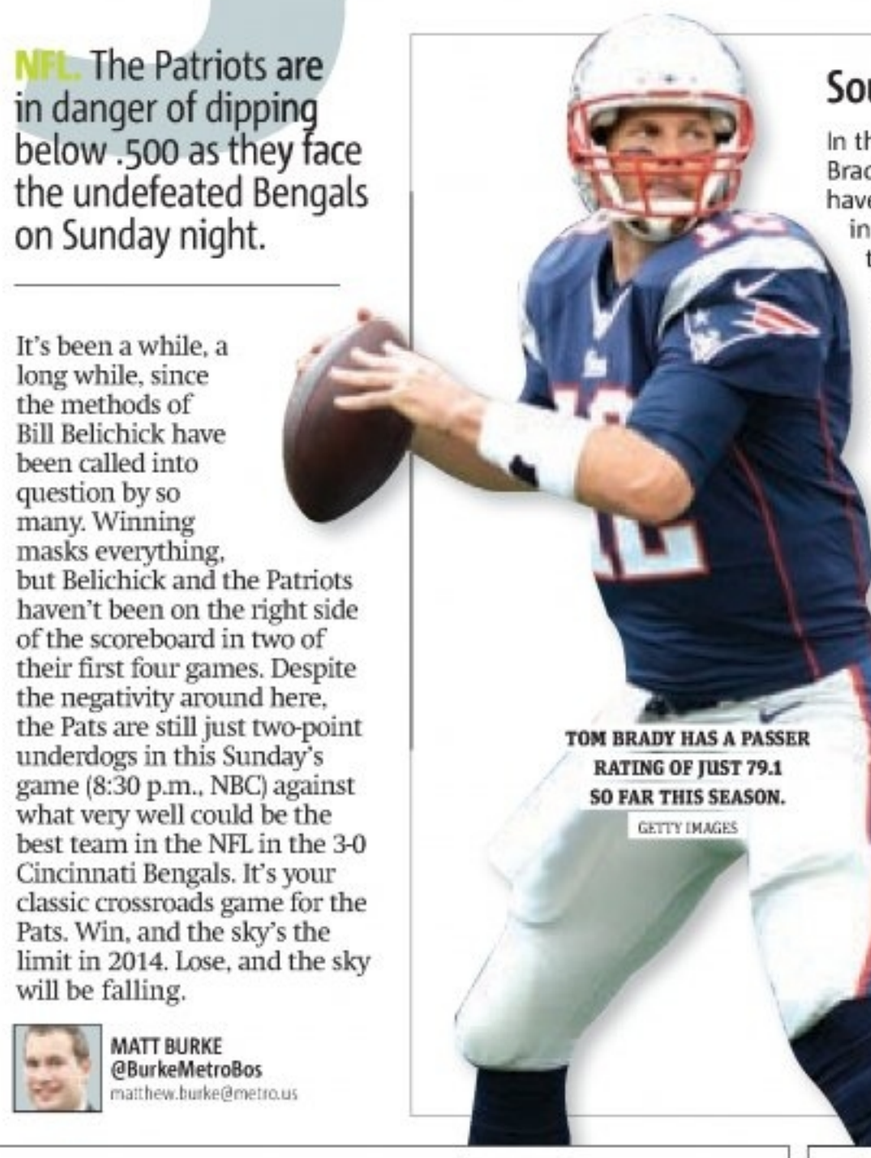
It may be Green day for Revis

Darrelle Revis told WEEI this week that he'd "feel comfortable approaching Bill [Belichick] about anything." Revis has been playing mostly zone, but could very well be asked, or ask himself, to be matched up with Bengals star receiver A.J. Green on Sunday night.

3 Patriots storylines to watch versus Bengals

NFL The Patriots are in danger of dipping below .500 as they face the undefeated Bengals on Sunday night.

It's been a while, a long while, since the methods of Bill Belichick have been called into question by so many. Winning masks everything, but Belichick and the Patriots haven't been on the right side of the scoreboard in two of their first four games. Despite the negativity around here, the Pats are still just two-point underdogs in this Sunday's game (8:30 p.m., NBC) against what very well could be the best team in the NFL in the 3-0 Cincinnati Bengals. It's your classic crossroads game for the Pats. Win, and the sky's the limit in 2014. Lose, and the sky will be falling.



TOM BRADY HAS A PASSER RATING OF JUST 79.1 SO FAR THIS SEASON.

1 Sour streaks

In the Bill Belichick/Tom Brady era, the Patriots rarely have back-to-back ugly outings, but that has already transpired in 2014 as they squeaked by winless Oakland at home, 16-9, and were blown out on the road by the Chiefs, 41-14, this past Monday night.

The Pats haven't lost back-to-back games since falling at home to Arizona and on the road at Baltimore early in the 2012 season. If they were to lose Sunday night to Cincinnati, it would mark the first time that the Pats were below .500 in the month of October since the 2002 season.

The 2002 season is the only year that the Patriots have failed to make the playoffs when Brady has started the majority of the games. In 2008, the Pats missed the playoffs despite an 11-5 record with Matt Cassel as the starter.

Another rarity in the past 13 years has been a multi-interception game for Brady. The future Hall of Famer did not have a multi-interception game at all last season and hadn't been picked off twice in one game since the 2012 AFC championship game loss to Baltimore.

Brady's 2012 season actually featured four multi-interception games, counting the playoffs, including December games against the 49ers and Jaguars in which he had back-to-back outings with a pair of picks. Brady was not picked off in the first three games of this season.

By the numbers

Dating back to last season, including the 2013 postseason, Tom Brady hasn't thrown for over 300 yards in eight straight games.

GIOVANI BERNARD

2 Runaway trains

Jamaal Charles and Knile Davis ran roughshod over the New England defense last Monday. Unfortunately for the Pats defense, the Bengals running back duo of Giovani Bernard and Jeremy Hill are just as dangerous. Neither Hill nor Bernard have a 100-yard rushing game so far this season, but the Bengals are averaging 121.7 yards per game on the ground. Bernard also excels as a pass-catching back, having caught 12 balls for 148 yards in three games. According to CincyJungle.com, Bernard is on pace to break James Brooks' franchise record for yards from scrimmage in a season.

3 Defense bending and breaking

A phrase that Patriots fans are quite familiar with from the team's championship years of the early and mid-2000s, is "bend but don't break."

It references a defense that may give up yards, but consistently keeps the opposition out of the end zone. The Bengals are currently the best in the league at this as they allow an average of 352.7 yards per game (ranking just 14th in the NFL) but give up a scant 11 points per game. The 11 points per game mark is easily the best number in the league as Arizona and Baltimore are tied for second best, allowing 15 points per game.

Interestingly, the Patriots defense is ranked No. 1 in the NFL in passing yards allowed, giving up just 185.5 yards per game, but is ranked just 14th in the league in points allowed per game at 22.5.

Bengals quarterback Andy Dalton has guided the Bengals to an undefeated record so far this season. / GETTY IMAGES

Bengals quarterback Andy Dalton has been solid in the Bengals' wins over the Ravens, Falcons and Titans. The fourth-year signal caller out of Texas Christian is averaging 240 yards per game and has hit on 55-of-84 passing attempts so far. Dalton has thrown two touchdown passes and just one interception.

A.J. Green remains Dalton's favorite target as he leads the Bengals with 233 yards of receiving on 12 catches. Mohamed Sanu has played well for Cincy as well, collecting 164 yards in the passing game.
